

Relationship between Course, Program Level, and University-Level Student Learning Outcomes

PSYC250 Social Psychology Fall 2011 (U.C.C. approved syllabus 1989)

Course Learning Outcomes (Objectives)	Program Student Learning Outcomes	University-level Student Learning Outcomes
Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:
To understand the social psychological emphasis on situational variables to explain behavior.	Knowledge Base of Psychology	Knowledge: Social Sciences
To realize the importance of social influence on our everyday behavior.	Knowledge Base of Psychology	Knowledge: Social Sciences
To become aware of the factors involved in mass communication, propaganda, and persuasion.	Knowledge Base of Psychology	Knowledge: Social Sciences
To consider the causes of human aggression and its alternatives.	Knowledge Base of Psychology	Knowledge: Social Sciences
To analyze the causes of prejudice and discrimination and ways of alleviating them.	Knowledge Base of Psychology	Knowledge: Social Sciences
To understand the variables involved in interpersonal attraction and helping behavior.	Knowledge Base of Psychology	Knowledge: Social Sciences
To realize the value of clear interpersonal communication and sensitivity.	Knowledge Base of Psychology; Personal Development	Knowledge: Social Sciences; Interpersonal
To develop the ability to apply psychological principles to the analysis of the student's own behavior and that of others in group settings.	Knowledge Base of Psychology; Application of Psychology; Personal Development	Knowledge: Social Sciences; Personal Development; Interpersonal
To develop an awareness of problems which are created or increased by life in today's industrial, automated society.	Knowledge Base of Psychology; Application of Psychology	Knowledge: Social Sciences